4th Mid-European Clay Conference is the most important scientific event in Europe in 2008, gathering more than 200 scientists and technologists studying the problems of clay rocks and minerals. During the conference several symposia will have place devoted to the application of bentonites as: sorbents of metals and toxic organic substances, catalysts, precursors of mesoporous molecular sieves (e.g. pillared clay heterostructures), components of drilling mud, as well as to modification of kaolinites and halloysites and problems of clays in engineering geology and environmental protection. There will be also organized a workshop devoted to clay minerals as nanomaterials in current and prospect applications.
